Lmh Publishing, Jamaica, 2002. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 217 x 141 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .At a place where variety came to mingle, On the eve of a not-unlike-tonight kind of night, I met him. Met him by a rock overlooking a bay. A cool, calypso voice and graying temples . Gingerbread Man is a story told by a man who has walked through a life incident, and seen his share of violence. Thomas has life life filled with coffee and cigarettes . not quite a policeman, a not-quite-private detective . a freelance investigator. Working for police force on problem crimes, a troubleshooter, perhaps? A Criminalist. There have been killings through the South. Killings bizarre in nature, some violent, some quietly horrific. The thread which ties them all together is a letter, left at the scene of each crime, signed GBM and numbered The police forces affected set up a joint operations center in Atlanta. To avoid Federal interference in their case, they hire Thomas as investigative coordinator. Thomas realizes that he has a take on the murders, an idea of an inking . but he wants another voice in his head. So he packs up his bag of files, and takes the crimes on the road to Charleston, where he has a friend called Claire: I needed to go fish for answers where I knew I would find them. Clair would know . Clair long-boned and beautiful . Clair, like Thomas, is ex-FBI, and she is the very best mind that Thomas can fathom. Through Clair s readings of the crime files, we re-visit the crimes along with Thomas. And along the way, we meet people of add interest: Clair, Michael, Buggy, Dixie, Frenchy and we meet some bald people too. There...
